Jakarta’s Soothing Revitalizing Spas

Since time immemorial, princesses and ladies of the courts in the ancient kingdoms on Java have been pampered with luxurious massages and aromatic body treatments to keep themselves beautiful and attractive at all times. They showered in invigorating springwater fresh from the mountains or in pools filled with scented water.

Additionally, to keep their inner wellness and youthfulness they drank special concocted herbal drinks made of handpicked choice leaves and roots. These special Indonesian herbs for inner health and outer beauty are known as “jamu”, which are for different purposes, to cleanse the skin, to brighten the eyes, to keep the body slim and a lot more.

Today, pioneers in Indonesian cosmetics among whom Moonyati Soedibyo, herself a princess from the royal court of Solo, and Martha Tilaar have both modernized the age-old beauty treatment and jamu into modern cosmetics through meticulous pharmaceutical research and production. Both their product lines are today among best sellers on the counters and in Spas and salons.
Both Martha Tilaar and Mooryati Soedibyo have also pioneered the Spa and Wellness programs in Indonesia, giving visitors the same luxurious treatment as in palaces of old, but with professional staff who adhere to international standard requirements.

Now in Jakarta, besides the Martha Tilaar Spas and the Taman Sari Royal Heritage Spas a host of other Spas brighten up the city scene, including in five star hotels and upmarket malls, which offer similar treatments, some providing the Indonesian lulur and the Indonesian massage, others have gone international with hydrotherapy, Swedish Spa, or with Shiatsu, gym and others. All in beautifully soothing surroundings.
